RICH DIGGINGS REPORTED IN

Peter Cargotich, a native of Slavonia, but an old Pacific coast miner-having arrived in California in 1851-is now in Pioche to organize an expedition to mine for gold and silver on the Stekeen or Simpson river, which forms the northern boundary of British Columbia, and empties into the Pacific ocean in lower Alaska waters. The reported mines are 220 miles from the coast, and something over 2,000 miles north of San Francisco. The following is Mr. Cargotich's history of the discovery of the mines, and what he knows about their character and richness:

In 1861, himself and forty-five others went up the coast on the schooner North Star, having a complete mining outfit for nine mouths' explorations. At the mouth of the Stekeen they bought canoes of the Indians and paddled up the river, prospecting as they proceeded-finding colors, by the way, everywhere-until they reached a place which they named Buck's Bar, after a French Canadian. There ounce diggings were found, were shallow and easily worked. But Mr. Cargotich, not satisfied with this, proceeded further up the river, alone. Having gone about 22 miles above Buck's Bar, where the North Fork of the Stekeen empties into the main river, he prospected some of the surface dirt, and got, on high bed rock, $2 50 to the pan in coarse gold, mixed with some silver. This was about the first of June, the water being very high. He worked at that place about three weeks, taking out near $4,000 in heavy gold, and then returned to the party below, and reported his good luck. All then moved up to the rich deposits, and twenty-one sluice boxes were made; but the water was too high when they were finished to set them. At last they were got in place, and the first day's work, on high bedrock, yielded 27 ounces. Then it was found that the bed-rock pitched down perpendicularly into the river, and it was impossible, on account of water, to follow it; but big pay was realized wherever high bed-rock could be found. They then, it now being about the first of October, went to work making winter quarters; having completed their cabins, they continued exploring, and found $10 and $20 diggings in various places. About the holidays scurvy broke out among the party, from which seventeen died. The antidote was wild cherry bark, a free use of which saved the majority from death.

Indians were employed to go down to the mouth of the river with the sick men, to a Russian man-of-war, on which they were taken down to Victoria. And then Mr. Cargotich and his partner again started out prospecting, ascending the North Fork with a hand-sled to its headwaters. There they found immense quantities of native silver, platina and gold. These metals were found in the gravel deposits along the river, in irreguiar masses, varying in weight from an ounce to over a pound. The Indians said that seven days' travel further north would take them where the precious metals existed in still larger quantities. But both being again attacked with scurvy, they returned to Victoria, carrying with them about $4,000 in gold dust. They coasted down the entire distance in

In the spring, he soon as the ice broke,

"Then," says Mr. Cargotich, "I went into business in Victoria, and have ever since been trying to organize an expedition to return. I have many friends and acquaintances in Victoria and San Francisco, as well as Pioche, men of standing and reliability, who will vouch for my statements. I am now here in Pioche to get together a company of good, practical miners to return with me. All wishing further information can get it by calling on me."

Mr. Cargotich showed us a lump of silver of about two ounces weight, which he says he found in the diggings up on the North Fork of the Stekeen. Now, having given Mr. Cargotich's story as it came from his own lips, we leave the public to come to their own conclusions. He tells a frank, straightforward story, and seems to be a man of good practical judgment.

THE D., G. & U. R. R.-Mr. Evans, one of the Directors of the Denver, Georgetown and Utah Railroad, writes to a prominent citizen of this place that the road will be completed with the utmost expedition from Denver to Georgetown, after which the company will give all their energy and means to its extension across Iron county, Utah, to St. George, and then to Pioche. This promises to be an early railroad outlet to the East.

Washington, March 12. Judge Richardson will to-morrow assame charge of the Treasury Department as Acting Secretary. Boutwell this afternoon made his last official signature. He will not resign, however, until his credentials, which are expected to-morrow night, are received.

Senator Sumner called on Boutwell this afternoon, and congratulated him in these words: "I congratulate the country, I congratulate the State, and I congratulate myself in having you as my

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., March 13. The Clergymen's Association in this city publish resolutions sympathising with the Father Stocks movement against the absolute power in America of the bishops, which they regard as involving the general interests of citizens, and hail it as the dawn of a new era, which will liberalize the Catholic Church, so as to place her within the limits of evangelical fraternity. The publication excites much comment. New York, March 13, It is believed nothing will now prevent the sailing of the Guard on the 20th, with articles for the Vienna Exposition.

In an interview with a Herald reporter at Washington yesterday, President Grant is reported as saying that no change would take place in the Cabinet beyond that which Boutwell's resignation will occasion. Nevertheless the financial policy of the Administration will not be changed. He hopes to see the Republic of Spain well established, and thinks by the end of the year the independence of Cuba will be secured. No trouble is apprehended from the Haytians, and the President thinks the Samana Bay scheme will result in the acquisition of San Domingo by our Government for ten or fifteen millions.

CHICAGO, March 13. A Washington special says of E. Payson Smith, who was yesterday appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs, that he was before the war a Congregationalist preacher in the West, and during the war a field general of the Christian Commission. He is now an agent of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. He was nominated by the Peace Commission, and is said by his friends to be an honest and capable man.

Specials all say there is no longer any doubt about Richardson's appointment as Secretary of the Treasury.

The Tribune special says as the Caldwell debate progresses it becomes more and more evident that Morton and a majority of the Committee on Elections made a mistake in reporting a resolution declaring Caldwell's election illegal, instead of recommending his expulsion, if, indeed, they were not the victims of a trick practiced by some of the committee ill becoming a Senator. Many Senators who believe Caldwell guilty, and would vote to expel him, do not believe the Senate had a right to go behind his certificate of election and inquire into the motives influencing members of the Legislature in voting for him; that the only questions the Senate can ask are these: Was the body choosing the Senator the legal Legislature of the State? Were the legal forms complied with? If both these questions are answered in the affirmative, the Senator who received a majority of the votes was legally elected, no matter what may have been the motives which influenced members in their votes: that the United States Senate cannot try members of a State Legislature or review their action.
